SUPPLEMENTAL INDEX LOCORUM.

There are unusually many places mentioned in the Alberbury Register. The large parish contained two chapelries that are now independent parishes, Great Wollaston and Criggion, as well as a large number of hamlets and isolated houses. The adjoining parishes of Ford and Cardeston, though parochially independent, retained the right of burial at Alberbury, while so many parishioners of Westbury, Worthen, Llandrinio, Buttington, and even Guilsfield availed themselves of Alberbury Church that the indexers have not given a tithe of the references. There are 59 allusions to Shrewsbury beside the references given, among them one to Holy Cross (p. 626), and one to Frankwell (p. 452). The entries from Feb. 3rd, 1767, to Dec. 30th, 1779, occur in two volumes, and owing to an oversight, were repeated in the printed copy, but the index does not give the references to both.

The hamlets of Alberbury mentioned in the Register are: Wattlesburgh (this is partially in the parish of Cardeston, which takes in all Wattlesburgh Heath), Stanford (in a detached piece of Montgomeryshire), Great and Little Bretchel, Benthall, Little Shrawardine, Great and Little Wollaston (or Willaston, as the Register generally spells it), Rowton, Eyton, Loton, Hayes, Bausley, Hargrave, Bulthey and Berley, Trevenant, Middletown, Winnington, Uppington, Braggington, Amaston, Heyford, Pecknall, Coedway, Crew Green and Brinford; these last four, like Bausley and Criggion, originally in Montgomeryshire. To these must be added the White Abbey, (called often the Black Abbey, or in some entries simply the Abbey), Lower Wood, The Glyn, and Glyn Common (where stands Old Parr's house, alluded to on pp. 408, 460), the Heath, and the Heath Gate, the Hills, the Mountain, Ryewood, Monk's Field, Stocksfield, the Park, the Paddock, the Bank, Placey-Court, Shotton, the Workhouse (which has many entries), Newtown (or Newton) near Criggion, the Lane, the Rose and Crown (on the old road over the Long Mountain, near Trevenant), the Dingle, the Cross Gates, near Ford, Heyford Mill, Brewnant and Smithyfield. The Heldre is also frequently mentioned, and so is the Pentre, which in one entry is called the Pentre, alias Bausley. Ford's Heath, and the Pavement Gates at Chavel, in Ford parish, also occur fairly frequently.

It may be well to add the following corrections to the Index:—
